Deb Wofford, local woodcarver, owned and operated an art gallery in downtown Noblesville, Indiana for 20 years. Deb's passion for the arts became a mission to combine both the world of artistic expression and the virtually invisible world of disability together. Her knowledge in both areas came more from life experiences rather than books and degrees. That being said, sometimes her decisions, or shall we say indecisions, were less than perfect, but the end result ...? Well, it worked.

This groundbreaking study of race, religion and popular culture in the 21st century United States focuses on a new concept, "Muslim Cool." Muslim Cool is a way of being an American Muslim—displayed in ideas, dress, social activism in the 'hood, and in complex relationships to state power. Constructed through hip hop and the performance of Blackness, Muslim Cool is a way of engaging with the Black American experience by both Black and non-Black young Muslims that challenges racist norms in the U.S. as well as dominant ethnic and religious structures within American Muslim communities. Drawing on over two years of ethnographic research, Su'ad Abdul Khabeer illuminates the ways in which young and multiethnic U.S. Muslims draw on Blackness to construct their identities as Muslims. This is a form of critical Muslim self-making that builds on interconnections and intersections, rather than divisions between "Black" and "Muslim." Thus, by countering the notion that Blackness and the Muslim experience are fundamentally different, Muslim Cool poses a critical challenge to dominant ideas that Muslims are “foreign” to the United States and puts Blackness at the center of the study of American Islam. Yet Muslim Cool also demonstrates that connections to Blackness made through hip hop are critical and contested—critical because they push back against the pervasive phenomenon of anti-Blackness and contested because questions of race, class, gender, and nationality continue to complicate self-making in the United States.

Downtown Ladies Informal Commercial Importers, a Haitian Anthropologist and Self-Making in Jamaica University of Chicago Press
The Caribbean “market woman” is ingrained in the popular imagination as the archetype of black womanhood in countries throughout the region. Challenging this stereotype and other outdated images of black women, Downtown Ladies offers a more complex picture by documenting the history of independent international traders—known as informal commercial importers, or ICIs—who travel abroad to import and export a vast array of consumer goods sold in the public markets of Kingston, Jamaica. Both by-products of and participants in globalization, ICIs operate on multiple levels and, since their emergence in the 1970s, have made significant contributions to the regional, national, and global economies. Gina Ulysse carefully explores how ICIs, determined to be self-employed, struggle with government regulation and other social tensions to negotiate their autonomy. Informing this story of self-fashioning with reflections on her own experience as a young Haitian anthropologist, Ulysse combines the study of political economy with the study of individual and collective identity to reveal the uneven consequences of disrupting traditional class, color, and gender codes in individual societies and around the world.

Focusing on the student experience from the last quarter of the nineteenth century through the troubled 1960s, this collection of fourteen essays examines university life as a part of social and intellectual history. It brings to light the work of a new generation of researchers who have moved away from the narrower concern with institutional growth that has typified most historical writing in this field. Contributors include Paul Axelrod, Michael Behiels, Judith Fingard, Chad Gaffield, Yves Gingras, Patricia Jasen, Nancy Kiefer, Susan Laskin, Malcolm MacLeod, Lynne Marks, A.B. McKillop, Barry M. Moody, Diana Pederson, Ruth Roach Pierson, James Pitsula, John G. Reid, and Keith Walden. Aimed at gentlemen looking for a good time on the strip, whether it be a bachelor party or guy's weekend, the star of the Discovery Channel's reality series "American Casino" provides the where and how much for hotels, food, drink, gambling, sport, entertainment, and companionship in Sin City. The thirteen short stories show the life and challenges of a group of Romanian and Romanian Jew friends after they escape Romania of Ceausescu. Their destinies brought them first to Israel and subsequently to Canada or USA. The main characters are Dan and Vera, a couple struggling to come to terms with immigration, assimilation, and with Dan's mild borderline personality disorder. Vera's struggle to keep the balance in life and the sanity in her family as a first-generation immigrant is also shown. The stories are fiction inspired by real life.

How women in turn-of-the-century Chicago used their consumer power to challenge male domination of public spaces and stake their own claim to downtown. Popular culture assumes that women are born to shop and that cities welcome their trade. But for a long time America's downtowns were hardly welcoming to women. Emily Remus turns to Chicago at the turn of the twentieth century to chronicle a largely unheralded revolution in women's rights that took place not at the ballot box but in the streets and stores of the business district. After the city's Great Fire, Chicago's downtown rose like a phoenix to become a center of urban capitalism. Moneyed women explored the newly built department stores, theaters, and restaurants that invited their patronage and encouraged them to indulge their fancies. Yet their presence and purchasing power were not universally appreciated. City officials, clergymen, and influential industrialists condemned these women's conspicuous new habits as they took their place on crowded streets in a business district once dominated by men. A Shoppers' Paradise reveals crucial points of conflict as consuming women accessed the city center: the nature of urban commerce, the place of women, the morality of consumer pleasure. The social, economic, and legal clashes that ensued, and their outcome, reshaped the downtown environment for everyone and established women's new rights to consumption, mobility, and freedom.

Under the floorboards of a ruined homestead near Joshua Hills, desert rattlesnakes guard a decades-old family rivalry and a long-hidden treasure that should have remained in the past. In the ruins, Cassidy Michaels, a tracker for Joshua Hills Search and Rescue, uncovers a map hidden for almost a century that leads her ever-deeper into danger of the deadly variety. Cassidy puts herself at risk in order to protect an elusive cat burglar and fellow treasure hunter determined to find Ronald Kingsley's famous jewelry, long-lost in one of the homesteads. Her life is complicated by Misty Montague, a rival from Cassidy's high school days, who will stop at nothing to lure away Cassidy's husband. Peter Drucker's lively and thoughtful memoirs are now available in paperback with a new introduction by the author. He writes with wit and spirit about people he has encountered in a long and varied life, including Sigmund Freud, Henry Luce, Alfred Sloan, John L. Lewis, and Marshall McLuhan. After beginning with his childhood in Vienna during and after World War I, Drucker moves on to Europe in the 1920s and early 1930s, describing the imminent doom posed by Hitler and the Nazis. He then goes on to describe London during the 1930s, America during the New Deal era, the World War II years, and beyond. According to John Brooks of The New York Times Book Review, "Peter Drucker is at a corner cafe, delightfully regaling anyone who will listen with tales of what must be one of the more varied—and for a practitioner of such a narrow skill as that of management counseling, astonishing—of contemporary professional lives." Dorothy Rabinowitz of the Washington Post writes, "The famous are here as well as the infamous.... All are the beneficiaries, for better or for worse, of Drucker's unerring eye for psychological detail, his remorseless curiosity, and his imaginative sympathy.... Drucker's book appears in a stroke to have restored the art of the memoir and of the essay." Adventures of a Bystander reflects Drucker's vitality, infinite curiosity, and interest in people, ideas, and the forces behind them. His book is a personal and informal account of the rich life of an independent man of letters, a life that spans eight decades and two continents. It will be of interest to scholars and professionals in the business world, historians, sociologists, and admirers of Peter Drucker.

This book provides an up-to-date introduction to the important and growing field of urban anthropology. This is an increasingly critical area of study, as more than half of the world's population now lives in cities and anthropological research is increasingly done in an urban context. Exploring contemporary anthropological approaches to the urban, the authors consider: How can we define urban anthropology? What are the main themes of twenty-first century urban anthropological research? What are the possible future directions in the field? The chapters cover topics such as urban mobilities, place-making and public space, production and consumption, politics and governance. These are illustrated by lively case studies drawn from a diverse range of urban settings in the global North and South. Accessible yet theoretically incisive, Introducing Urban Anthropology will be a valuable resource for anthropology students as well as of interest to those working in urban studies and related disciplines such as sociology and geography.

This volume features bioarchaeological research that interrogates the human skeleton in concert with material culture, ethnographic data and archival research. This approach provides examples of how these intersections of inquiry can be used to consider the larger social and political contexts in which people lived and the manner in which they died. Bioarchaeologists are in a unique position to develop rich interpretations of the lived experiences of skeletonized individuals. Using their skills in multiple contexts, bioarchaeologists are also situated to consider the ethical nature and inherent humanity of the research collections that have been used because they represent deceased for whom there are records identifying them. These collections have been the basis for generating basic information regarding the human skeletal transcript. Ironically though, these collections themselves have not been studied with the same degree of understanding and interpretation that is applied to archaeological collections.

An amazing collection of thousands of jokes - great for any occasions or just to get a great belly-laugh.

In the first book -They Came They Saw - an advanced civilization's scouting party has captured a human male which they know is going to be responsible for creating the only weapon they have no defense against. Their technology is such that they are able to intercept and read the cognitive thoughts of those, the aliens, subject to the trans-hypnotic mind manipulating effects of their thought invoking chamber. Because it does in fact force the mind to think about what they want it to think it is not a pleasant experience. The torture of Tury or the one his mind is forced to endure does allow him to see and understand things he would not have imagined on his own. His greatest discovery at that point is that he can insert code into his memory, as one would a computer, and cause the subconscious to act purposely. Tury even realizes he must make the aliens believe they are getting information in order to give his new found mind coding knowledge time to grow. To do this he concocts a child's parable involving, God and Beelzebub, to add credence to the fantasy story that he makes his captors fight his mind as if he's unwilling to give it to them. The better he gets at resisting and thwarting their mind probe; and the more the female commander of the capture and expedition ship learns about humans and their method of reproduction the more, Joyce as she calls herself, is a Kinsu. She starts to believe that even if her prisoner is not whom they think he is he could still serve a purpose for her:: In the second book - Joyce has decided that she can, and will force, a merger between her kind's method of species creation and the human method of procreation. So because Tury has become somewhat resistant to their mind probing technology and he seems not be readily seducible she embarks on learning from what she believes are professionals at overcoming a man's resistance to furnishing his seed and takes over a brothel. There with the help of her two of crewmen she begins her journey in a dangerous direction for her species. On the one side she is proceeding as the mission dictates, on another side she is proceeding with her plan to become immortal; while at the same time pursuing the possibility of gaining Lucifer as an ally through which to overpower the strongest of their kind; their supreme leader Continuum:: In the third book - Pandora Hits the Fan - things begin to unravel. Continuum has allowed a survivor from those that will become his greatest obstacle to eliminate both, the party he was already warring with, and the human menace that has accidentally discovered the only weapon his species, the Kinsus, cannot counter. Dregnimoore the long surviving Kazinazil return home and as the only one to have ever survived a Kinsu attack; he is given charge and amasses a fleet that manages to get through to the earth. There Joyce has managed to merge her species method of reproduction with that the very human she wanted to and that she knew she needed to be able to merge it with. New experience being something that can't be prepared for she is unprepared for the changes she will suffer. Two of her crewmen have taken, to, human females for companions. Both of the women work in the brothel they now run; and Marcus her second in command, plus ODE her security officer believe they are experiencing real and true love. Joyce has always known Marcus is a spy for Continuum she tries and fails to kill him. She also inadvisably kills both of the females her two most powerful crew men are in love with:: In the fourth book - The Sky is Falling - little is going as planed events have conspired to work against humanity. The Kinsu are split in their loyalties. Joyce and Tury are dead. War is happening over the skies of the earth and humans while desperately trying to influence their own fate are mostly reduced to spectators. The three advanced civilizations with a stake in the outcome of the war are going at each other. The prize ...the decision on what the

All the Downtown Ladies - Book # 2 - Tury has become somewhat resistant to the Kinsu mind probing technology and even though he seems somewhat willing he also seems to not be readily seduce-able. At least not by the methods Joyce had employed. Methods learned and studied on the voyage to earth. Joyce has decided that she can, and will force, a merger between her kind's manner of species creation and the human process of procreation. Tury gives her a white rose which she believes symbolizes the beginning of the human male and female mating ritual. Therefore she holds out hope that through him her experiment will work. But her specimen and reluctant seed donor has not succumbed to her seduction efforts. Therefore Joyce embarks on learning from those she believes are professionals at overcoming a man's resistance to furnishing his seed and takes over a brothel. There with the help of her two of crewmen. After killing the brothel's original proprietor, she begins her journey in an even more dangerous direction for herself personally. Her species is forbidden under pain of death to mix for the purpose of recreating itself with other species. To hide the real purpose of her excursions out among the humans. She proceeds as per the mission dictates. The mission's primary purpose to find the one responsible and prevent him from creating the weapon. Success or failure with that part notwithstanding to initiate humanities demise. That part mandated she look for and find collaborators and facilitators among the human. Of her own accord she is proceeding with her plan to become immortal. She is convinced that the human method of procreation and the kinsu method of conjoining halves in a sense can be manipulated toward her end. Although that is still priority number one for her. Tury's efforts to thwart her accomplishment of that end has given her another just as important goal. Along with the way she intends to merge the different methods which will allow her to give herself rebirth for all eternity. At least at any time she feels she needs it. The achievement of immortality is but the beginning of her plan to in the end rule the universe. She believes; at the same time that there is the possibility she can gain Lucifer himself as an ally. That together the two of them can overpower the strongest of their kind. The Kinsu supreme leader, the most powerful Kinsu to have ever existed. Continuum himself. Joyce believing she can control everything around her has introduced M'etznuculie, currently known as Marcus, the name he has chosen as his human name. Marcus is the ship's number two. Her second in command. The two of them along with her chief of security, and her most trusted confidant OswDahEic. He is currently known as Grute by two of her working girls. He will later come to be known as ODE. The human sounding name he's chooses for himself. ODE is a shortened version of his real name. Together the three of them will run the brothel and learn everything they need to know to learn. Which in the end is meant to facilitate the elimination of human life on earth. There among the ladies of the night Marcus and Grute, aka ODE, become infatuated with their individual assigned concubine. Their two ladies. Their infatuation leads them to believe they are experiencing true love. Believes further reinforced because the ladies in question also believe they have found the men of their dreams.

Touring. Seeing. Knowing. Travel often evokes strong reactions and engagements. But what of the ethics and politics of this experience? Through critical, personal reflections, the essays in Detours grapple with the legacies of cultural imperialism that shape travel, research, and writing. Influenced by the works of anthropologists Ruth Behar and Renato Rosaldo, the scholars and journalists in this volume consider how first encounters—those initial, awkward attempts to learn about a culture and a people—evolved into enduring and critical engagements. Contemplating the ethics and racial politics of traveling and doing research abroad, they call attention to the power and privilege that permit researchers to enter people's lives, ask intimate questions, and publish those disclosures. Focusing on Latin America and the Caribbean, they ask, Why this place? What keeps us coming back? And what role do we play in producing narratives of inequality, uneven development, and global spectacle? The book examines the "politics of return"—the experiences made possible by revisiting a field site over extended periods of time—of scholars and journalists who have spent decades working in and writing about Latin America and the Caribbean. Contributors aren't telling a story of enlightenment and goodwill; they focus instead on the slippages and conundrums that marked them and raised questions of their own intentions and intellectual commitments. Speaking from the intersection of race, class, and gender, the contributors explore the hubris and nostalgia that motivate returning again and again to a particular place. Through personal stories, they examine their changing ideas of Latin America and the Caribbean and how those places have shaped the people they've become, as writers, as teachers, and as activists.

Culture Works addresses and critiques an important dimension of the work of culture, an argument made by enthusiasts of creative economies that culture contributes to the GDP, employment, social cohesion, and other forms of neoliberal development. While culture does make important contributions to national and urban economies, the incentives and benefits of participating in this economy are not distributed equally, due to restructuring that neoliberal policies have wrought from the 1980s on, as well as long-standing social structures, such as racism and classism, that breed inequality. The cultural economy promises to make life better, particularly in cities, but not everyone can take advantage of it for decent jobs. Exposing and challenging the taken-for-granted assumptions around questions of space, value and mobility that are sustained by neoliberal treatments of culture, Culture Works explores some of the hierarchies of cultural workers that these engender, as they play out in a variety of settings, from shopping malls in Puerto Rico and art galleries in New York to tango tourism in Buenos Aires. Noted scholar Arlene Davila brilliantly reveals how similar dynamics of space, value and mobility come to bear in each location, inspiring particular cultural politics that have repercussions that are both geographically specific, but also ultimately global in scope.

Book # 2- Tury's 100% certain that whatever Joyce's reasons are; especially for her method of interrogation They're not good for him, nor humanity. To survive Tury must navigate between reality and fantasy. Joyce needs to understand human procreation so as to manipulate and merge it with the Kinsu process of conjoining. Tury refuses to succumb to her seduction efforts and resists the Kinsus mind-probing technology. To overcome his resistance she usurps a brothel. Tury's efforts to thwart her give her another goal. Gain an ally of legend, so the two of them can overpower the strongest of her kind; Continuum himself. Thus because her mission's primary goal, is find the one responsible, prevent the weapon's creation; then initiate human extinction. Finding collaborators and facilitators among humans begins. Along with Marcus and OswDahEic; the three of them seek to learn everything needed to seal humanity's fate.

This work starts with a substantial historical account of the different ways that freedom, race and gender were intertwined in Jamaica and Haiti after the end of slavery. Newly free men and women were rebound into a racialized class order with acceptable and unacceptable forms of masculinity and femininity. Sheller traces these histories of racialized and sexualized forms of freedom to the present.
