There are 500,000 people who earn a living from selling on eBay full-time. Most American homes have so many unused items lying somewhere. That is where some sellers start—by selling things they no longer use. When they start doing well, they begin listing items for other sellers. Other people choose to invest their resources in eBay-related franchises. Take the example of Scott Kluth who decided to invest in iSold It. With negotiated supplier agreements and access to a check fulfillment system, he became a franchisee then opened a store. Currently, Scott Kluth location is among iSold It top 10 locations. Scott's store lists an average of 28 new items every day. Customers usually start by bringing in a single item to see how things play out. When it sells, they come with more items. This store has been in business for only a year and it started bringing in profit in the third month. One of the best things about selling on eBay is the fact that you can do it as a hobby at first, then make it a full-time business if things go well.

"You might be doing a lot of the Right things when running your retail business. It only takes a few of the Wrong things for the business to turn against you." In 2019, Amazon and eBay accounted for 29.7% of U.S. online retail sales. And that's growing. Amazon in particular, despite already being the largest online retailer, continues to outgrow eCommerce as a whole year after year. That's a huge chunk of the market for just two companies. But it doesn't tell the whole story. eBay sells nothing itself. All the sales attributed to eBay are in fact third-party businesses selling through the platform. Amazon is a retailer in its own right, but 53% of its unit sales are from third-party merchants - an estimated 57% of Amazon's total value. So yes, these marketplaces occupy a vast space in eCommerce, but it's a space that's accessible to everyone. Online marketplaces are wonderfully convenient for consumers, but only because of the large number of third-party sellers already doing business there. There's also plenty of pie left for independent eCommerce websites. Within the 70.3% of the market not belonging to Amazon and eBay there are other large companies, of course, but also a buzzing independent eCommerce market. Both online marketplaces and independent eCommerce stores are huge, but their success and your success is not mutually exclusive.
